State Child Care Assistance Policies: Wyoming

December 2013

• Income eligibility limit: In 2013, a family of three in Wyoming could qualify for child care assistance with an annual income up to $35,808 (183 percent of poverty, 57 percent of state median income).

• Waiting list: Wyoming had no waiting list for child care assistance as of February 2013.

• Parent copayments: In 2013, a family of three with an income at 100 percent of poverty ($19,530 a year) receiving child care assistance in Wyoming had no copayment. A family of three with an income at 150 percent of poverty ($29,295 a year) receiving child care assistance paid $39 per month, or 2 percent of its income, in copayments.

• Reimbursement rates: In 2013, Wyoming’s reimbursement rates for child care providers serving families receiving child care assistance were below the federally recommended level—the 75th percentile of current market rates, which is the level designed to give families access to 75 percent of the providers in their community.

  • Wyoming’s monthly reimbursement rate for center care for a four-year-old was $530, which was $68 (11 percent) below the 75th percentile of current market rates for this type of care.

  • Wyoming’s monthly reimbursement rate for center care for a one-year-old was $594, which was $55 (8 percent) below the 75th percentile of current market rates for this type of care.

• Tiered reimbursement rates: In 2013, Wyoming did not pay higher reimbursement rates for higher-quality care.

• Eligibility for parents searching for a job: In 2013, Wyoming did not allow parents to receive child care assistance while searching for a job.

1 This income limit takes into account a standard deduction of $200 per month ($2,400 a year) for each working parent, assuming there is one working parent in the family. The stated income limit, in policy, was $33,408 in February 2013. Also note that in February 2013, families already receiving assistance could continue doing so until a stated income limit of $42,960. As of July 2013, the stated income limit to qualify for assistance was increased to $34,188 (175 percent of poverty), and the stated exit eligibility limit was increased to $43,956 (225 percent of poverty) to adjust for the 2013 federal poverty level.

2 These copayment amounts were calculated based on adjusted income, taking into account the standard income deduction.
