STATE CHILD CARE ASSISTANCE POLICIES: WYOMING

- Income eligibility limit: In 2016, a family of three in Wyoming could qualify for child care assistance with an annual income up to $37,560 (186 percent of poverty, 56 percent of state median income).¹
- Waiting list: Wyoming had no waiting list for child care assistance as of February 2016.
- Parent copayments: In 2016, a family of three with an income at 100 percent of poverty ($20,160 a year) receiving child care assistance in Wyoming had no copayment. A family of three with an income at 150 percent of poverty ($30,240 a year) receiving child care assistance paid $43 per month, or 2 percent of its income, in copayments.²
- Reimbursement rates: In 2016, Wyoming's reimbursement rates for child care providers serving families receiving child care assistance were below the federally recommended level—the 75th percentile of current market rates, which is the level designed to give families access to 75 percent of the providers in their community.
 - Wyoming's monthly reimbursement rate for center care for a four-year-old was $521, which was $194 (27 percent) below the 75th percentile of current market rates for this type of care.
 - Wyoming's monthly reimbursement rate for center care for a one-year-old was $573, which was $168 (23 percent) below the 75th percentile of current market rates for this type of care.
- Tiered reimbursement rates: In 2016, Wyoming did not pay higher reimbursement rates for higher-quality care.
- Eligibility for parents searching for a job: In February 2016, Wyoming did not allow parents to receive child care assistance while searching for a job.³

1 This income limit takes into account a standard deduction of $200 per month ($2,400 a year) for each working parent, assuming there is one working parent in the family. In February 2016, the stated income limit to qualify for assistance, in policy, was $35,160. Also note that families receiving assistance could continue to do so up to a stated income limit of $45,204. As of April 2016, the stated income limit to qualify for assistance was increased to $35,280 (175 percent of poverty), and the stated exit eligibility limit was increased to $45,360 (225 percent of poverty), to adjust for the 2016 federal poverty level.

2 These copayment amounts were calculated based on adjusted income, taking into account the income deduction discussed above.

3 The state began allowing parents receiving child care assistance to continue to receive it while searching for a job for up to 90 days as of September 2016.
